Ninetieth Anniversary

IN THE LIFESPAN OF NATIONS 1 90 years is very young. It is appropriate then that as Canada approaches its ninetieth anniversary July 1, it should be showing all the vigor and enterprise of youth.

Few Dominion Days have found the nation in a more ebullient economic state. The development of natural resources, our manufacturing output and agricultural activity have combined to produce a Gross National Product of record propor-Our trade has increased correspondingly. Population is at the highest level in history and rapidly going higher. The standard of living is not uniform from coast to coast, but in general is surpassed only by that of the United States.

Internationally, our prestige and influence - while not those of a major power - stand at an all-time Canada has taken a place in United Nations affairs, in disarmament conferences, in co-operative defence, in global trade and welfare organizations, to an extent never before attained.

Our present position must be represented as on a rising incline, not at the peak of a wave. There is no indication that current progress will not be continued. Indeed, our national problem in many fields is concerned with the rate of advancement rather than its reality.

As with any organism, we must expect to suffer growing pains. Few so quickly countries have moved toward their destiny as has Canada during this post-war decade. That comment might easily be extended to include the 40 years that have elapsed since the end of the First World War.

At the same time it must be acknowledged that with our growing development and prosperity have come growing responsibilities and dangers. As we become bigger the world becomes smaller. And the world which Canada will face on its ninetieth birthday will be a far more compact and complex world than which was seen on its 80th, on its 50th, or on the day when it took first momentous step as an autonomous confederation of provToday we stand as an ally of Britain, bound by blood and history. But our neighbor to the south has assumed leadership of the free world, and our ties of geography and com-mon democratic ideals with this new power give us a dual role.

Our ninetieth anniversary finds us in a world split into two ideological camps, on issues and in partnerships which the Fathers of Confederation could not have predicted in the wildest flight of fancy. We are deeply involved in a cold war of never before experienced in the world - a constant war of diplomatic manoeuvre, of rivalry in armaments, of propaganda and pro-

It is a world in which Canada has become a strong arm in defence of freedom, a valued ally at Western conference tables. This environment alone has contributed vastly to our accelerated emergence as the globe's leading "medium" power.

In this uneasy international situation we stand on the threshold of a new era-an atomic age whose potentials are only slowly being real-The opportunities for human betterment are immeasurable, but so are the opportunities for human destruction either through the silent accumulation of lethal radiation or the sudden cataclysm of explosion.

This, too, would have been far beyond the imagination of the founders of our country. The wonder and the genius of their act is to be seen in the fact that the structure they wrought is, in nature and in form, of a strength to survive in any world climate short of complete physical destruction.

The events of the next 90 years will no doubt be much more rapid and revolutionary than in the past 90. But our foundation has been well and truly laid; it has stood the preliminary tests of nearly a century. And the national edifice which we are building on it ninetieth storey which is the handiwork of our generation - will survive the coming years if our work is as sound as that of the men who dreamed the dream of nationhood and who planned and began the task.

No Hope Atoll

I up with a tiny coral atoll in the south Pacific, which a century ago was the sanctuary for a Scotsman who put the world behind him. Apparently accompanied only by a small herd of pigs, the voluntary hermit escaped from a civilization he did not like to find happiness in solitude.

His diary and remains of his habitation were found when British authorities searched the little island to make sure no one was going to be injured by their H-bomb test 200 The diary has now miles away. reached a London museum.

He would have dismissed as the wildest nonsense, as he landed in his chosen Paradise, any suggestion that some day the atoll might be rendered poisonous to all life by an explosion that would take place far over the horizon. This tiny dot of coral, he would have argued, must be safe for all time from the depredations of civilization.

And so it was for a century. But now the world has found it and it can be safe no more. Fireballs, radiation, fall-out and similar evidences of our progress have made it uninhabitable. The snake has entered Eden, and Adam will have no regrets 100 years ago. But there can be that he did not wait to see it.

As Our Readers See It

Speedboats on Elk Lake

I have been following with keen in-terest the accounts and arguments in regards to speed boat races on Elk Lake. It is certainly a shame that a few individuals cannot see beyond their own selfish desires.

They say there are no other local areas that are as good and have warm water in case they upset. Also that they only want the lake for one day. That may well be but how about the grease and oil slicks they will leave d? They claim that there will be but I have seen it happen and spoil good swimming areas as well as doing harm to wildlife.

At Elk Lake there are several beaches wimming classes for the children Victoria area. This includes a secluded beach for crippled children. They will be using these beaches all summer, not just one day. Elk Lake was picked for these children for the same reason. It is one of the very few places on the lower Island with good beaches and warm water.

The authorities say they cannot stop these people. In that case everyone with a small boat should put it on Elk Lake on July 1 and stop this nonsense once and for all. I like to watch speedboat races as well as the most avid fan but I think that the pleasure of thousands of children sies.

Job Well Done

We believe that the news services in itish Columbia deserve a vote of thanks for their role in the recent gen eral election.

I cannot find in any recent issue of the Times an account of this year's Le Mans sports car race. It would appear that this race is news only when it is accompanied by fatal and spectacular accidents, such as were widely publicized at Le Mans two years ago, and in the Mille Miglia this year.

Your attitude, sir, is typical of the entality that causes these tragedies a morbid desire for thrills without any appreciation of the technical and physical skills involved and the advances in automotive engineering which result.

Any racing enthusiast or race organ-er can tell that this sort of one-sided publicity is directly responsible for attracting the type of spectator who per-sists in placing himself in the most dangerous vantage points in company with equally moronic individuals until the in-

LOOSE ENDS

The Nation's Mind, Aged Ninety

IF John A. Macdonald and his fellow builders of Confederation could see Canada on Monday, our ninetieth national anniversary, they would be somewhat surprised by the nation's physical look. But not very surprised, for these optimistic pioneers generally exaggerated our prospects. What would surprise them most, I suspect, is the change in the Canadian mind.

In 1867 the state was not only embryonic, weak and remote but suspect. To be sure, there had to be a gov-Hutchison to be a nation, but most men wanted the government to leave them alone and restrict itself to a few simple affairs.

THE idea that the state should look after the people in their private lives, bonus their babies, pension them in old age, provide them with hospitals, subsidize their farm products and manage their money system—all this would have seemed insane to most of the Fathers of Confederation.

They would have regarded our ent system of government as radical, socialistic and probably impossible.

The basic struggle at the Quebec Conference, which drafted the British North America Act, was between the advocates a strong central government those who feared centralization. donald was for a stronger central gov-ernment than the conference would accept. He had to compromise his own beliefs. But we can see this year, with special clarity, that Macdonald anticipated the nation's real trend much better than most of his colleagues.

FROM its first hours until now the central government has been steadily gaining power and will continue to gain it at the expense of local governments, no matter what the politicians may say for election purposes.

Salt Water River

There were times, of course, when the centre seemed to lose power and the perimeter to gain it. The legal victories of Oliver Mowat's provincial government over the federal government, in those famous appeals to the Privy Council, were celebrated with bonfires all over Ontario. They burned too soon.

Over and over again in the first forty or fifty years of Confederation the Privy Council whittled down the federal government's power and increased that of the provinces, thus directly reversing Fathers. No legal decision, however could halt the centripetal course

THE politicians continued, even during the recent election, to champion the cause of local gvernment and denounce the federal government's expansion, but they made sure that it would expand just the same.

It had to expand because anothe stream of events was under way-the people were demanding services from the state that only a central government could possibly provide.

Hence the paradox in the recent elec-tion, as in many previous elections, of statesmen promising to curb the appetite of the central government for power and for taxes while at the same time promising to create more central services (like increased old age pensions, parity prices for farmers, yast public works and so on) that inevitably involve more power and more taxes.

CENTRALIZATION is denounced regularly by every opposition in every election, whatever party happens to be in power. And centralization as Macdonald foresaw, grows stronger all the time. It must grow stronger simply because the structure of government reflects the ada, as elsewhere, is becoming more and more collectivist, less and less individ-

Whether this is a good thing or a bad whether this is a good tang or a cau-thing-we cannot judge yet and our great-grandchildren may have ideas about it quite different from ours, but there can be no doubt about the fact.

THE state has never ceased to grow I from the hour, just ninety years ago, when it was born with the salute of canon, fireworks and oratory in Ottawa. And it grew quite perceptibly on June 10 when we voted for various new state services.

The Fathers of Confederation regarded the state as a very restricted author ity that would do a few things beyond the means of the individual and no more.
Today we regard the state as a loving mother who can do anything. That, ever more than the physical transformation of half a continent, is the great change in Canadian life during its first ninety ears of nationhood.

Doubtless at first glance the men who launched the nation would be shocked by many of its present arrangements but, on second glance, they would be amazed to see how well it is working. how smoothly it operates despite the quadrennial election disturbances, how easily it carries new burdens, how flexibly it changes its methods, and how steadily it improves the lot of the ordinary man.

THIS is not the state or the society that the Fathers planned. In most ways both state and society are better than they could expect. But without the genius of these men, most of them al-most forgotten, we would have no Canadian state or society today. We would be an American state, or states, within an American society—a thought perhaps worth pondering on this long holiday being, is likely to continue to be very formidable indeed.

It is a pity that the case of the op-osition was not debated publicly before the negotiations began in London It may well become necessary to debate the case before the negotiations can go much further. For it is not realistic to assume, as the President does when he discusses the subject in his over-simplifying way, that the whole problem is whether the Russians will agree to some arrangement that they will not be able to violate. Although for my own part, I would make a limited agreement, say to sus-pend the nuclear tests for a trial period, I do not doubt that the case against such an agreement must be recognized and answered. Otherwise, we may find rejecting an international agreement that the President has made. There are, it would seem, two principal objections to making an agreement.

The first is that to suspend testing would be to sacrifice advantages that we now have and others that we expect to are not only ahead of the Russians in pares the two great epochs of disillusion, is that, whereas in the 19th century the misfits just brooded over their melancholy and drew away from active life, in the 20th century they become angry with the conditions which, although in fact they have increased the area of opthey regard as having caused them frustration.

the race of armaments but the scientists think that we are within reach of advances which will put us decisively ahead for at least some considerable period of time.

I do not know what there is in it, nuclear armaments may be developed which would make this country largely invulnerable to nuclear attack.

If that were to happen, we should-ntil Russia develops the same defensive weapons - be way ahead in the

Equal Sacrifice

In any event, the burden will be one President and his supporters to prove that a pause in the race of armaments will not be an unequal sacrifice.

The second of the principal objections is that any agreement, however limited technically, in a matter of such critical importance as nuclear weapons will have a profound influence on all the great issues which divide the world.

An effect of the meeting at the sumin 1955 at Geneva was to downgrade the international importance of like the division of Germany. As stantial agreement now which covers the ultimate weapons of modern war, will have a similar, perhaps a larger, downgrading effect.

Whether this would be a good thing or a bad one is the really debatable

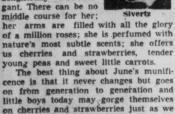

Does the downgrading of issues like the division of Germany, of Korea, of Viet Nam, like the rivalry in the Middle East, like the withdrawal of the Soviet Army from Eastern Europe, mean that these problems will never be solved?

Or does it mean that they will all be solved in the end as suits the Soviet

Or does it mean that as the tension relaxes, the national and local impulses towards independence and nationalism will assert themselves?

No one knows for certain and it is foolish to be dogmatic. The future is not under our control, But as between the risks of standing pat and the risks of venturing forward, why should we take counsel only of our fears?

Nobody more than this column is in favor of the abolition of the archaic monstrosity of death sentences, but let us not lose sight of the fact that this man committed a foul crime; not even a life spent in the useful occupation of sewing mailbags can ever atone for it.

People are all too prone to reverse the Shakespearian order and let the consequences trammel up the assassination. Our judgment in these matters has, alas, become much

Living as we do in a sealed capsule of security, soothed by psychology and insulated from the realities of the world by advertising, we are steadily losing our appreciation of such immutable virtues as justice. No doubt psychiatry can find any number of reasons for the commission of every crime in the calendar, including murder.

What's going on here? Some few weeks But we venture to say that it is incapable of finding an excuse. Despite the old saw that to understand is to forgive, you can't run the country that way. There is a very practical distinction between reasons, which may be good or bad, and excuses, which are usually irrelevant.

The fuzzy attitude which we have toward punishment for crime may in part be due to the possibility that of late too much emphasis has been placed on rehabilitation of the criminal, forgetting that retribution has its place; indeed the two are closely related, as anyone who has ever administered a hearty belt on the backside of a naughty child knows.

And the average criminal whose lack of self control has landed him in trouble with the law is very much like a naughty child.

There is a lot to be said for the revival of such effective instruments of retribution as the stocks and the pillory; particularly Gentle readers will remember that this was a contraption in which the criminal stood, his head and his hands secured in an uncomfortable position, while the passers by jeered or threw missiles according to their humor. Its object was to humiliate, and this column has no doubt that an hour or two of such treatment would be most effective in removing bravado. The prospects of being displayed as a fool for all to laugh at is as good a deterrent from crime as could be devised. Let's have it back.

Another effective punishment was being acked in the horsepond. Unfortunately, we are rather short of horseponds these days, but perhaps something could be made out of Harrison Yacht Springs. Ducking in the horsepond was particularly effective in the case of women convicted of being common scolds (incidentally, THERE's a fine old offence which I am sorry to say is no longer

Consideration of punishments can lead, us down some fascinating byways of the law.
But let us not be led away from the undoubted fact that whatever punishment the criminal receives, he brings it on himself.

Scotland Yard literally can't keep up with the present rate of murder in this country. In the past two months there have been 29 slayings, ranging all over the country-Birmingham, Halifax, London, Exeter, etc.

Trying to cope with the investigations at these far-flung points Scotland Yard has run out of murder squad detectives and now has to borrow from London police divisions:

U.S. Business Presents Study

In Paradoxes

By Walter Breed Jr.

New York (AP)—Winding up the first six months of 1957, U.S.

business this week presented a study in paradoxes and contradictions.

The paradox—perhaps more apparent than real—was that costs and prices kept going up while money and credit remained scarce and goods flowed from U.S. factories and farms in ever the money and credit remained scarce and goods flowed from U.S. factories and farms in ever the process were exchanged in a single scale in Canada more apparent than real—was that costs and prices kept going up while money and credit remained scarce and goods flowed from U.S. factories and farms in ever the money and credit remained scarce and goods flowed from U.S. factories and farms in ever the money and credit remained scarce and goods flowed from U.S. factories and farms in ever the money and credit remained scarce and goods flowed from U.S. factories and farms in ever the process budget next fall. Observet increasing abundance.

A case in point was the steel in Canada base been in last furnaces and open of a decline in new orders.

The problem of rising costs and of a cell in Canada has been in marrow but each section had a cell in Canada has been in marrow but each section had a cell in Canada has been in marrow but each section had a constraint with the final session and a gentle lift in tenniums, action on Canadian St. 6 close at $7.35 after touching $7.80.

Steel Company of Canada, in Hamilton, was the first to raise the prices. Customers in Windsor received a letter last Friday guish it from the traditional inflation. In the usual, old-style type of inflation, prices are forced upward because people have lots of money and can get all the credit they want, while autos, houses and other consumer goods are hard to come by. In the first half nomy during the first six months of 1957.

All in all, it was a good first half. There were soft spots. Steel production, home building, freight carloadings, auto and appliance sales were below expectations, but heavy construction and retail sales were strong. The boom, to be sure, was no longer climbing at last year's dizzy pace. But it was still climbing, and business activity as a whole moved slowly toward new peaks.

WIDER SWINGS

The ups and downs of business sentiment, as indicated by the stock market, followed much stock market followed marke stock market, followed much wider swings than the actual ups and downs of business itself. Measured in terms of gross national product, total business actional products. tivity at mid-year was boiling along at an annual rate of about $430,000,000,000—up eight per cent

Best guess was that the steel price increase would have little immediate effect on retail prices thousands of consumer items would swallow the added expense

Industry experts said the $6 a ton steel boost would add 66 cents to the cost of making a family-sized refrigerator, $11.58 to the production cost of a $3,000 autothe cost of an electric toaster But while manufacturers' cost would assuredly go up, some signs seemed to indicate that consumer prices would be held in check in etition-at least for a while

FOR DOMINI

On some tomorrow, when our children and their children's children will have added their work to ours, there will be a looking back; as we look back, this Dominion Day, to take the measure of our own progress. They should say of us then that we knew well how to value our freedom and independence but that we set one vision above all . the building of our country into a pleasant land while seeking peace for all people of all nations.

WE WELCOME VISITORS

Two-year-old John Willman is already an enthusiastic camper. Here he helps his father, Lieut. Clarence Willman, load up the family car for a weekend camping trip. Other members of the family help carry out equipment. Left is Linda, five, who is taking along her swimming float; Mrs. Willman; Robert, 11, and Sherrell, 14. who has just graduated from Oak Bay Junior High School. The Willmans are looking forward to many weekends of camping on the Island during the summer. They live at 2252 Allenby Street.

Families Pack Tents For Outdoor Weekend

The holiday weekend has found many Victoria families loading up the car with tent, sleeping bags, air mattresses, portable stove, the children and the dog, and setting off Livisland on a complex trip.

setting off Up-Island on a camping trip.

Camping holidays, whether for two weeks or just a weekend, are gaining popularity every year as more and more families discover that they are the one sort of vacation that appeals to nearly every member.

Dad and the children delight in being able to wear their oldest clothes all day, while mother enjoys having a minimum of cooking and housekeeping to do.

Vancouver Island has many good camping spots maintained by the Forest Service, where there is space for cars and tents, fireplaces with supplies of readychopped wood, drinking water and washrooms.

Some of the most popular are at Parksville, Miracle Beach and Little Qualicum Falls.

Thoroughly experienced campers who are making their first trip of the season this weekend are Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Birtwistle, 235 Cadillac, who began camping holidays when their eidest son, now nine, was a baby.

Today they are Up-Island getting plenty of assistance in setting up their huge tent from Raymond, nine; Teddie, seven; Lennie, six; Joy, four, and David, two.

"The children love camping," Mrs. Birtwistle said.
"The boys go fishing with their father, and they all play on the beach most of the day."

on the beach most of the day."

"It's quite a job getting organized," she laughed,
"but we all feel it's worthwhile."

For the youngest members of the family, Mrs. Birt-wistle improvises sleeping bags from their cot mattresses by using large safety pins to secure "glankets around the mattresses.

In the evenings, the Birtwistles have a family music session in front of their tent, with Mr. Birtwistle playing his ukulele or guitar.

Another family that likes camping are Lieut, and Mrs. Clarence Willman, 2252 Allenby, and their four children, Sherrell, 14; Robert, 11; Linda, five, and John, two.

The Willmans began camping expeditions last year and enjoyed them so much that they have bought more equipment and intend to spend many weekends at Island camps this summer.

They have already been out this year, to a new camp north of Sidney.

To make packing up their equipment easier, Lieut. Willman took the handles off the cooking pots so that they fit inside each other. He made special screws so that the handles can be easily attached for cooking. The pots and dishes all fit into one water bucket.

Air mattresses are inflated when the family arrives at the camping site, a job for the youngsters.

at the camping site, a job for the youngsters.

Like the Birtwistles, the Willmans take along a Coleman stove for quick cooking. Little equipment is needed besides the stove, tent, sleeping bags and cooking gear, and clothes, of course, are kept to a minimum.

These camping trips are good for promoting a feeling of unity in a growing-up family, and children lucky enough to be taken on them will have wonderful memories to store up.

More Camping Room At Up-Island Grounds

Officials of the provincial park branch of the Department of Recreation and Conservation have prepared for a record number of visitors to Vancouver Island campsites this year. Last year, 74,000 campers used the sites at Provincial parks on the Island.

Englishman River Park campsite has been enlarged from eight to 90 units for this summer, and many campers are expected to enjoy the trout and steelhead fishing in the river. Little Qualicum Falls, which features trails for hiking and many sightseeing jaunts in the neighborhood, now has 57 units, an increase of 30 over last year.

Largest camp is at Miracle Beach, halfway between Courtenay and Campbell River, which accommodates 162 families. The sandy beach and good swimming make this a favorite with children. Smaller camps are McDonald Park, Sidney: Ivy Green. near Ladysmith; Quinsam, near Elk Falls Park, and Stamp Falls.

All camps have a resident supervisor, picnic sites, cooking and sanitary facilities.

A "unit" is space for a tent, parking area for a car and

A "unit" is space for a tent, parking area for a car and a fireplace. Some of the camps, including Miracle Beach have double units for two tents.

Barbecue pits are featured at some, and modern changing houses have been erected for the convenience of bathers at Miracle Beach and Ivy Green.

British Columbians are paying more and more visits to their provincial parks. In 1948, 113,000 visitors were recorded at the parks here and on the mainland; last year, there were 1,950,000, of whom 80 per cent were from B.C.

Checking over the tent before they set off Up-Island on their first camping trip of the season is the Birtwistle family of 235 Cadillac. Left to right are Raymond, nine; Lennie, six, who is prepared for some under-water swimming; Mrs. Birtwistle; Teddie, seven; Joy, four, and David two, and J. W. Birtwistle. They began their camping expeditions when eldest son, Raymond, was a baby.

There's INCO NICKEL in modern Canadian-made stainless steel flatware

STAINLESS STEEL flatware in smart, modern designs is now produced in Canada.

And practically all of it contains Inco Nickel, because most of the stainless steel used in flatware is made in Canada with Inco Nickel.

Inco Nickel starts out as raw ore at Inco's mines near Sudbury, Ontario. Down in the mines, workmen blast out the nickel-bearing ore. It is milled and smelted at Copper Cliff. Then it goes to Inco's refinery at Port Colborne. A Canadian steel company uses this refined nickel to make stainless steel. In the form of strip, this stainless steel goes to Canadian flatware manufacturers where it · is fashioned into knives, forks and spoons.

> All these operations help provide jobs for thousands of workmen. In this way, Inco Nickel helps stimulate the growth and development of industry in Canada.

YOU SAID TO ME-

A Sunday message of help and comfort for those puzzled, depressed or low in spirit.

You said to me, "Isn't it strange that wherever one goes one hears people say they want peace, and yet so few are willing to share in the price of peace?"

Very few people have really certain actions will lead a group thought this question out. Almost everybody has an idea of what should be done by this leader or that nation to solve the world's problems, but it is a different matter when one asks world must be one in which them to thoroughly examine their ideas, and find out if that is what they really think when will have the power to change each individual so that he is responsibility for putting ideas no longer dishonest or impure into action.

Public opinion determines to loving, but seeks the good of a great extent the policy of a all the world, and lives so that nation, and you and I are the makers of public opinion.

If we are willing to let someone else do our thinking for us, and never try to examine where wills.

If you have found such an idea, and it has changed your whole life and given you power to overcome the evil in your-self which is the root cause of all the trouble between nations, then be prepared to fight for it, and never give up until you see it spread to all around you, That idea comes from God, and every man can share in it. SALVATION Sun 11 a.m. san 7.30 p.m. SALVATION Sunday School 8.45 a.m. Wed. 8 p.m., Prayer Thurs. 1 p.m. Ladies WELCOME
